

Penn

DEPARTMENT of
MEDICAL ETHICS & HEALTH POLICY

Payment and Organizational Challenges in Care of Patients with ADRD

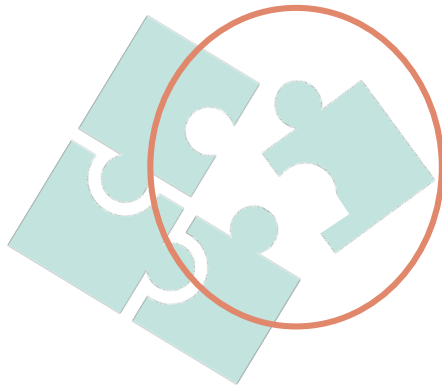

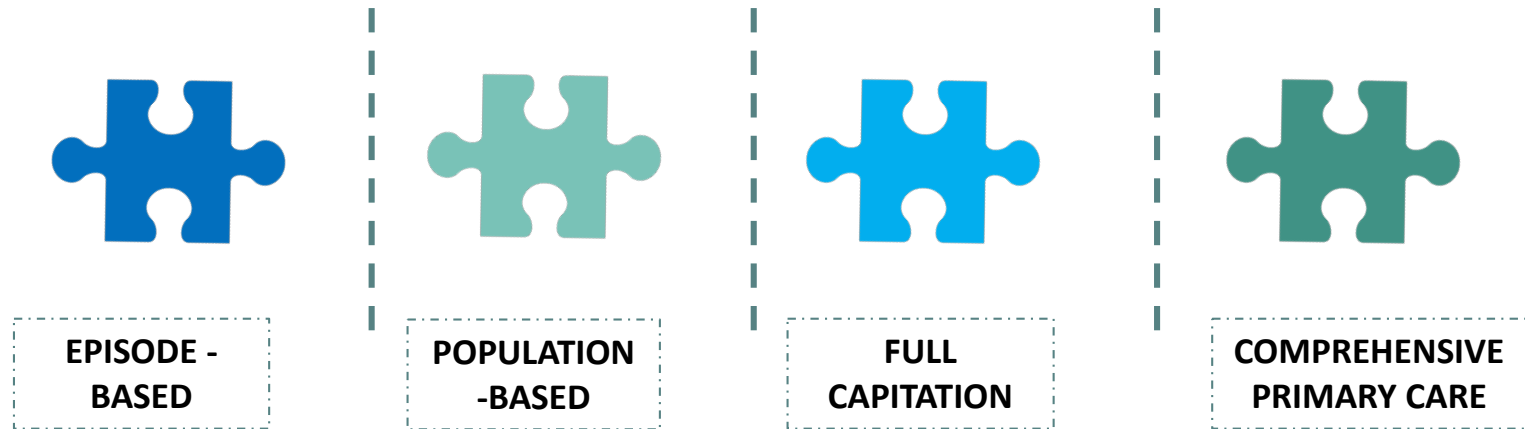

Amol Navathe, MD, PhD
University of Pennsylvania
 @amolnavathe

May 23rd, 2022

This work is my own and does not have relation to MedPAC

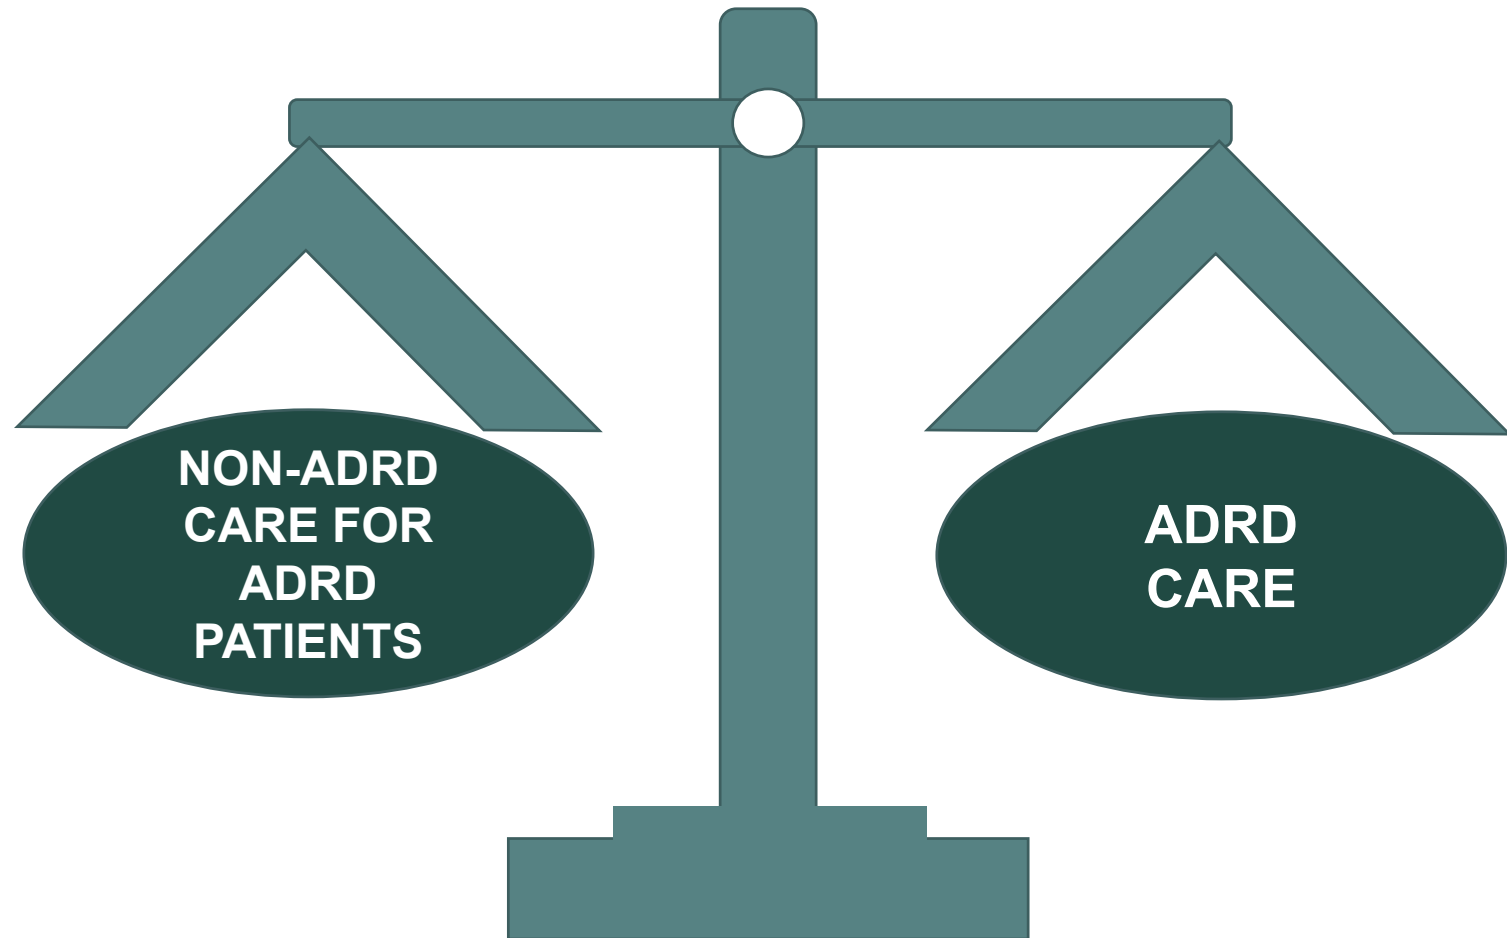

Disclosures: Grants from Humana, Hawaii Medical Service Association, grants from Anthem Public Policy Institute, grants from Commonwealth Fund, grants from Oscar Health, grants from Cigna Corporation, grants from Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, grants from Donaghue Foundation, grants from Pennsylvania Department of Health*, grants from Ochsner Health System, grants from United Healthcare, grants from Blue Cross Blue Shield of NC, grants from Blue Shield of CA, personal fees from Navvis Healthcare, personal fees from Agathos, Inc., personal fees and equity from Navahealth, personal fees from YNHHSC/CORE, personal fees from Maine Health Accountable Care Organization, personal fees from Maine Department of Health and Human Services, personal fees from National University Health System - Singapore, personal fees from Ministry of Health - Singapore, personal fees from Elsevier Press, personal fees from Medicare Payment Advisory Commission, personal fees from Cleveland Clinic, personal fees from Analysis Group, personal fees from VBID Health, personal fees from the Federal Trade Commission, and equity from Clarify Health, and uncompensated board membership from Integrated Services, Inc. outside the submitted work.

No Payment Model is Perfect for ADRD

ADRD is a population with special needs.

Payment Model Implications for ADRD

The Pathway Between Payment And Organizations Is Not Direct

Thank You!

Amol Navathe

amol@pennmedicine.upenn.edu

 @amolnavathe